
Subject: License Counting

Posted by glasairnz on Tue, 05 Jul 2005 09:38:17 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Hi

I have a 5 user MS Exchange System. The first one of my users with multiple email addresses is defined in Exchange for example:

pam@abc.com
pamela@abc.com
pam.smith@abc.com
pamela.smith@abc.com

Note that this is just one user. The problem is when people use each one of these slightly different email addresses, the license counter counts them as separate users.

So I thought I would be clever, I deleted the 4 above entries from NoSpamToday and replaced it with

pam*@abc.com

This means that pam with anything after it is acceptable, but NoSpamToday still counts separate licenses for all of the different forms of pam. This makes sense as *@abc.com also counts separately.

I would like the system to be able to differentiate between counting licenses from @abc.com (which is good) and pam@abc.com (which is bad).

Your comments would be appreciated.

Thanks

Mike
