
Subject: Testing out SA

Posted by collin on Fri, 30 Sep 2005 16:30:35 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Have a test email account that's been getting a lot of SPAM.

I've configured the account in the Spam Assassin filter with accept/deliver but mark up as SPAM. In short the SPAM comes through w/o any markup, thus makes it hard to use Outlook's rules to do any filtering.

Am I missing something in the filter configuration?

THX

Subject: Re: Testing out SA

Posted by support on Tue, 04 Oct 2005 12:51:29 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

> Have a test email account that's been getting a lot of SPAM.

>

> I've configured the account in the Spam Assassin filter with > accept/deliver but mark up as SPAM. In short the SPAM comes > through w/o any markup, thus makes it hard to use Outlook's > rules to do any filtering.

>

> Am I missing something in the filter configuration?

How did you go about this? Did you use the "blacklist_to" config setting of SpamAssassin, this should work.

If you're sure an account gets nothing else but spam, you might as well set up a spam trap filter, and learn all mail to this account automatically as spam. This helps you to keep other accounts spam-free.
