I'm using NST for Workstation with Thunderbird 1.0.2. But when I'm sending mail, mostly Thunderbirds gives the error "Error when copying to sent mail folder".

I googled this problem and it seems to me that some "local proxies", like NST, may cause this, maybe because of the renaming of the mail server and the mail account in Thunderbird.

I know that this is a more likely a bug in Thunderbird than in NST, but I wonder if anyone here know about a work around?

I'm using XP, Thunderbird 1.0.2, NST 2.0.22 (registered) and a POP account.

Thanks.

This is an error one might expect with IMAP, where the server handles all the folders. POP3 (and NoSpamToday!) is involved only with receiving mail, both mail storage (moving between folders) and sending should be completely unaffected.

Is there anyone else with this problem?
