Putting these characters directly in the subject is a violation of the MIME standard, and as such it is flagged in the log. These characters must be encoded, using e.g. quoted-printable or base-64 encoding.

However, as many mail clients (most notably some Outlook versions) violate this particular requirement, it has no impact on filtering other than adding 0.3 spam points to the overall score. You can disable this by adding the line

score    MIME_8BIT_HEADER    0

to the local.cf file (in the sa\ruleset subdirectory of your installation).
